“cultivation” means the act of raising cannabis plants and includes the pruning of cannabis plants, but excludes the harvesting of them;

“extraction” means any process that removes, separates or isolates cannabinoids from cannabis biomass, excluding the removal of plant parts for sale;

“harvesting”, in relation to cannabis, means all of the steps taken after cultivation, but before extraction, including (but not limited to) —

- (a) the cutting, trimming or removal of any cannabis plant material;
- (b) the grafting, division or transplant of a cannabis plant; and
- (c) the placing of a cannabis plant in a container for any purpose other than disposal;

“high-THC cannabis” means a cannabis plant in cultivation which contains greater than 0.2% THC content by reference to the mature plant;

“indoors”, in relation to the cultivation of cannabis, means the cultivation of cannabis inside a structure which —

- (a) has an impermeable floor;

“manufacture” of a cannabis-derived product, means any step taken after extraction that —

- (a) uses a preparation; or
- (b) creates a substance or compound,

by means of any process, including the refinement, distillation, purification or blending of one or more substances, at least one of which contains cannabinoids, but manufacture of a cannabis-derived product does not occur if cannabis biomass is a significant component of the process;

“preparation” means one or more substances or compounds which are created, distilled, isolated, drawn, or in any other way derived, from cannabis biomass excluding fibres, hemp hurds or any material that contains only traces of controlled cannabinoids;

“pruning” means an activity conducted during the period of cultivation and includes (but is not limited to) the cutting away of dead or overgrown branches or stems in order to—

- (a) encourage growth;
